GOLF TIP OF THE MONTH: COURSE MANAGEMENT

Proper course management is required to play consistent golf. When playing out on the course, be target oriented rather than swing oriented. Practice your swing mechanics out on the range. If there is trouble on the right side of a hole, it will be easier to play away to the left side to avoid any extra shots. Tee the ball on the side of trouble, which will allow your ball more room for error. Play your favorite ball flight and the shots you love. Don't hit the shots you are not comfortable with. When in doubt, always choose a safer shot instead of an aggressive one. Pick safe clubs and targets to hit on each hole. You can also mix in aggressive decisions if there are some opportunities. Position your ball below the hole as often as possible to allow for putting or chipping uphill more often.
